

ABSTRACT

B² Mice that are deficient in p53 are found to have memory disorders and/or behavioral disorders such as increased anxiety. A method of using p53-deficient mice to screen compounds for memory restoring activity and/or anti-anxiety activity is described.
